

Don Nelson is the Project Finance Director for Bison Renewable Energy (BRE). Don was instrumental in raising capital and assisting in the formation of Bison Renewable Energy LLC in March 2006. BRE was formed for the purpose of developing, owning, and managing Biogas Regional Anaerobic Digesters (BRAD s) in select locations in the United States. Construction commenced for BRE's first BRAD ("The Cornerstone BRAD, LLC") near Hull, Iowa in June of 2007. A project completion date of July 2008 is projected. Upon completion biogas will be produced, cleaned and compressed for delivery to Northern Natural gases pipeline.

Don also co-founded and is a managing member of Green Capital, LLC . This South Dakota venture capital firm was formed in 2006 with a primary objective to invest in companies engaged in the renewable fuels industry that offer an attractive return to members.

Don has more than 15 years experience in the agribusiness and commercial finance sector, including financing of large dairies, elevators, row crop farmers, swine producers, trucking companies, and ethanol plants. Don has managed numerous construction projects involving large dairies, hog confinements and commercial businesses. Don has an extensive background working with the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) on environmental and finance programs. Prior to joining BRE, Donald was a Vice President for The First National Bank in Sioux Falls, South Dakota.
